The Indescribable Women's Conference united over 500 women in celebration of God's goodness and faithfulness. Spirits were lifted by the heartfelt worship, and the in-depth teaching opened minds to the indescribable wonders of our Lord and King.

Now that we're home and settled back into real life, how do we take what we experienced on the mountaintop and apply it to the circumstances and relationships we face every day?

Remember God's Character. The world around us changes constantly. Our emotions, relationships, jobs and families fluctuate in the ever swaying tide of crises and culture. The unwavering perpetual Rock, however, is constant, unbending, continuous, and eternal. Go to the rock. Cling to it.

Remember God's Plan. God's plan is good, but not good in the generic sense we use to explain the smell of a favorite candle. God's goodness is an awesome, uncorrupted splendor that is inherent to God's character. God is and forever will be good. Take a minute today to recall the good He has done in your life.

Remember God's Provision. Seasons of grief or persecution can leave us wondering when and how God will provide for us - financially, emotionally, or relationally. Consider specific times when he has provided for you. Remember how he came through then? He'll do it again. Don't overlook what he's already given you. Whatever it is, use it today to shine for the Lord.

*"Thanks be to God for His indescribable gift!"
2 Corinthians 9:15*

- Create your own prayer walk. Pray for your coworkers or neighbors as you walk through your office building or neighborhood.
- Get out of your Comfort Zone. We refer to our high ropes course as "The Comfort Zone," but you don't have to dangle 30' in the air to practice the Trust and Obey principle. Get involved with a ministry at your church or start your own home Bible Study.
- Stretch your spiritual muscles. Write an unfamiliar Bible verse on an index card and place it where you'll see it every day. Replace it weekly with a new verse.

Janet Ables

Our Indescribable conference speaker, expressed during the weekend how her faith had been affected by her mother's illness. "The reminders to walk by faith, trust no matter what and focus on God's greatness, sovereignty, goodness and faithfulness were what have been sustaining me." Janet is the founder of Heart of the Home Ministries which is designed to nurture and uplift busy moms. She continues to be humbled by God's "continued and abundant grace" and find strength in His promises. All of Janet's messages from the women's conference can be found online at www.pybcc.org/messages.
